PRESENTS:

CAPTAIN BRITAIN!

CAPTAIN BRITAIN RACES DOWN A DESERTED CORRIDOR OF THE RED SKULL'S UNDERGROUND FORTRESS, IN HOPE OF SAVING THE LIVES OF CAPTAIN AMERICA AND PRIME MINISTER CALLAGHAN-- BUT ONLY TO DISCOVER--

THE SKULL'S BOMB IS SET TO EXPLODE WITHIN SECONDS!

MUST ACT-- FAST!

AND AT THAT SAME CATAclysmic INSTANT, ABOVE THE HIDDEN HEADQUARTERS OF THE FOURTH REICH, NICK FURY LEADS AN AIRBORNE S.T.R.I.K.E. SQUADRON TOWARD A FRIGHTENINGLY FATEFUL...

...GATHERING OF GLADIATORS!

AWRIGHT, HERE'S WHERE YA START EARNIN' YER PAY!

I DON'T KNOW IF YOU SOLDIER AS GOOD AS MY BOYS FROM S.H.I.E.L.D.---

-- BUT YOU BETTER! 'CAUSE THIS AIN'T NO DRY RUN! IT'S FOR REAL!

IF WE DON'T CLOBBER THE SKULL AND HIS GOONS--

--THEY'LL TAKE OVER THE WHOLE BLAMED WORLD!

THAT WAS CLOSE!

NOT CLOSE-- UNBELIEVABLE!

YOU TOOK THE ENTIRE BRUNT OF THE EXPLOSION WITH YOUR BODY--

--AND SURVIVED!

I'LL EXPLAIN! YOU SEE, AS I LEAPT AT THE BOMB, I PRESSED THE SECOND BUTTON ON MY STAFF--

--AND INSTANTANEOUSLY SURROUNDED MYSELF WITH AN INVISIBLE FORCE FIELD!

A PROTECTION NO LONGER REQUIRED!

NOW LET'S GET THE PAIR OF YOU FREED --AND BE AFTER THE RED SKULL!

STAND BACK! I'LL TRY TO PRY THE BARS LOOSE WITH MY STAFF!

I'M SURE THEY'LL GIVE WAY BEFORE IT

I ONLY WISH I WERE AS CONFIDENT OF MY OWN STRENGTH!

THE BARS-- THEY'RE STARTING TO BEND! BUT NOT ENOUGH!

NEXT WEEK: ABSOLUTELY THE FINAL CHAPTER
"HICKORY, DICKORY DEATH!"

Tell it to The CAPTAIN!

IT'S G.D. AND S.W. ONCE AGAIN!

Dear Larry,

The Captain Britain letters page has finally proven that although the letters in some of the other Marvel mags may be poorly written and full of irrelevant comment, the British Marvel audience is capable of intelligent, enjoyable and interesting writing.

It may, perhaps, be embarrassing to single out any particular letter writers, but the letter from Glenn Dakin and Steve War, which appeared in issue twelve, was one of the best I have ever read.

It was amusing, but you could still sense a concern for the state of Marvel and the standard of Captain Britain. The criticisms were delivered in a light-hearted manner, and although they were exaggerated to an outrageous degree, they had their roots in a true love of Marvel.

I don't like to analyse too much, so I had better go now before I get carried away. However, I do feel that more letters like the one I've mentioned would bring a great improvement to your already highly-respectable letters page.

Gordon Storey,
12 Stevenson Ave., Eaton Socran,
Cams.

We know EXACTLY what you mean when you speak of Glenn Dakin and Steve War. We know, because we receive from them, on average, one well-written, pertinent letter a week. We can't publish them all, that wouldn't be fair to other Marvelite letter-writers, eager to see themselves in print.

A VOTE FOR DOC DOOM

Dear Bullpen,

re: Captain Britain so far.

The origin was fairly well handled, considering that its telling is usually the most difficult part of launching a new super-hero. And getting a super-hero into costume must also be handled in an original way. Chris Claremont did well.

From issue 3 we were introduced to new characters and a mystery foe, all fairly interesting, but nothing out of the ordinary.

Hurricane was a typical super-villain type. His costume was well-designed, but a scorned weatherman who fell in a hurricane is a bit much.

It was interesting to find out more about Brian Braddock's life and his family in issues 8 and 9, and Dr. Synne was a nasty super-villain at his best. But there must be villains somewhere who make cracks in battle as Spiderman does, instead of the usual corny speeches.

But for all my complaints, I think C.B. is the best thing yet to come out of British Marvel. But please don't let a load of super-powered people suddenly appear in Britain. Instead, let's see a couple of well-established old Marvel villains. How about Dr. Doom -- as Britain is closer to Latveria than America. Let's see the Black Knight, Kazar (he's British) and I, too, cast my vote in favour of a team-up with Captain America.

Chris Green, RFO, KOF,
24 Brooklands Ave., Cleethorpes,
Humbly Grove.

This seems to be the week when Marveldom is making its assessment of Captain Britain. And it's fair to say that the signs are that the gullible cap has found a place in the Marvel Universe. Yep, we know he's a new boy with a lot to learn, but from now on, just watch him go. All manner of things are lined-up for him, all of 'em different, but all of 'em packed with excitement.

LAY OFF THE CRITS

Hi, fellas,

I've read all the issues of C.B. and loved 'em all. His costume, the colour, and the story. But I must say I'm sick of the letters from people picking holes in the Captain. I think if they don't like him they shouldn't read the mag. Well, anyway, I'll love it, and can't wait till next week's issue.

Bryan McCarthy,
17 Heron House, Ethelburga Est.,
Battersea, London.

Simple and right to the point. We have you too, Brian!

CB --- AN ASSESSMENT

Dear Marvel,

Enough has been seen of Marvel's newest creation to make an assessment. I have always thought that the creation of a new super-hero specifically for Britain would add a new dimension to British Marvel and that is exactly what the creation of Captain Britain has done. He is a super-hero in the best traditions of Spiderman and Daredevil, and has every chance of emulating their success.

Taking stock, I think it is fair to say that both artwork and writing have been a little inconsistent. The artwork started off well, reaching its best in issues six and seven, but after that it started to deteriorate. But on the storyline side the very opposite was the case. The origin, as told in issues one and two, was rather unoriginal and too briefly skipped over. Just exactly who are the two beings who gave Brian his power, and where do they come from? I hope that some sort of relationship can be built up between Brian and them. However, after the origin the scripting became progressively better, and several interesting characters have been introduced, including Jacko Tanner, Courtenay Ross, Chief Inspector Thomas, Kale Fraser and Brian's brother and sister. It is hoped that full use will be made of them all. Also, a lot more needs to be said on Brian's past, especially the relationship that existed between him and his late parents and the reasons for their death. The identity crisis introduced in issue eleven will also be of great interest in the future.

On the villain front, Hurricane made a refreshing change, he is both new and original. Dr. Synne, however, is disappointing.

I am sure I echo many other readers' thoughts in wishing to see Captain Britain meet Captain America. And, when it comes to villains, I should like to see him face the Green Goblin. Why? Simply because he is the greatest villain ever to have come from Marvel.

N.H.
Bucks.

Every so often we receive a letter which says a lot and says it well, but doesn't leave US very much to say. And yours, N.H., is such a massive. You've made a statement upon Captain Britain. We've read it with enormous interest, and so, we feel sure, will a large section of Marveldom. Thanks for taking all the trouble.
